

To whom it may concern: I wanted to express my disapproval of the FCC's action to allow LPFM services to take priority over current FM translator service. KLOVE is the primary radio station that I listen to and it is broadcast on the FM translators. If you remove this station, and others like it, there are not other local alternatives to this format of Christian radio in my area. The other local stations in my area are secular based, not family friendly in the dj's comments or the music. This station is a great example of a station which provides good music with a positive message to the community when the majority of our local stations play music which may contain cursing or lyrics about sex. What happened to allow kids to be kids and enjoy their innocence? I think this would be a big mistake if you allow LPFM stations to take priority over the current FM translator serviced stations. Thank you for your time and consideration. Cindy Green
